

DEMOCRATS PLAN TO PROLONG THE DELAY

REPUBLICANS REFUSE TO START CONSIDERATION OF THE TARIFF MEASURES.

ENGLAND IS NOT READY

To Present its Formal Protest in the Panama Canal Proposition Owing to Failure of Papers to Arrive.

Washington, July 18.—The Democrats of the senate defeated by a vote of 37 to 27, in an effort to have the wool bill taken up at the opening of today's session resumed their filibuster of yesterday against the 150 million dollar sundry civil appropriation bill.

Democratic leaders declare they would continue the filibuster until assured of a vote on the tariff bills. The big sundry civil appropriation bill against which the filibuster is directed carries many important government appropriations.

With the Panama Canal bill, the unfinished business the democratic leaders will be able to hold up the appropriation bill several days.

The difficulty in reaching an agreement is said to be on details only. The regular republicans are willing to permit a vote on tariff bills but the progressives want to eliminate the debate.

They demand they shall have opportunity to present amendments if the bills are discussed at length.

A. Mitchell Innes, in charge of the British embassy, appeared at the state department this forenoon and it was understood that he bore with him the British protest against pending Panama canal legislation which was expected to arrive in New York by mail steamer yesterday.

It appeared, however, that Innes had called to notify Secretary Knox that for some reason unknown to him the document had not yet arrived. Consequently the secretary and Innes agreed to refrain from any discussion of the subject pending the receipt of the papers.

When the senate took up the Panama canal bill today Senator Brandegee put in an estimate that foreign ships would pay approximately $10,000,000 a year in tolls under the provisions against which Great Britain has protested. Senator Stone estimated that if the Hague should decide against the United States, five years after the free toll law had been enacted, about $45,000 would have to be repaid to foreign vessel owners.

Leaders in the senate reached an agreement late today for a vote next week on the three democratic tariff measures as follows: Wool bill, Thursday; sugar bill, Friday; and excise tax bill Saturday. It is expected this agreement will be ratified before adjournment today and the democratic filibuster withdrawn.

The prevention of political activity on the part of postmasters and other federal office holders is sought in a bill reported favorably today by the house committee on reform in the civil service. The measure would prohibit such official from being delegates to any district, state or national convention or from becoming "perniciously active" in politics.

The rivers and harbors appropriation bill carrying about $33,000,000 including $6,000,000 for Mississippi river improvement was finally passed by the senate today when the conference report was adopted.

Berger of Wisconsin entertained the house today with a "keynote" speech on socialism. He described the socialist ticket "as the international ticket of humanity." The country is divided into classes much as monarchial countries declared Mr. Berger. "Therefore the working class—the men and women who work either with their brains or their hands—must have a party of their own to take care of the interests of their own class."

Mr. Berger attacked Governor Wilson as a "creature of the bosses" and assailed President Taft and Col. Roosevelt and referred to William J. Bryan as a "dictator." The only hope for working men he asserted lay in the socialist party.

PRINCE VICTOR NAPOLEON HOPES TO RULE FRANCE.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Brussels, July 18.—Many were the congratulatory messages received today by Prince Victor Napoleon, the Bonaparte, on the occasion of his fiftieth birthday anniversary. Despite the tributes printed from time to time of his renunciation of all claim to the French throne, there are countless numbers of people who firmly believe that the Prince will yet become Napoleon IV. Of late his star has appeared to be in the ascendant. His marriage to Princess Clementine of Belgium two years ago caused a substantial rise in the Pretender's stock. Princess Clementine inherited many millions from her father King Leopold. To this fact is probably due much of the enthusiasm that has since been displayed amongst the supporters of the Napoleonic cause.

THINK JUAREZ WILL SOON BE EVACUATED

Activity of Vigilance Committee Leads to Belief That Rebels Will Leave City Soon.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Juarez, July 18.—Activities of the citizens vigilance committee organized to preserve order during the passage of the city from rebel to federal control led today to the report that the insurgents would evacuate Juarez within forty-eight hours. The rebels admitted that they intend to abandon Juarez soon moving the garrison of 400 men here to Casas Grandes 141 miles south west of the Mexican Northwestern railroad, but have made no announcement as to the time for their proposed departure. The local vigilance organization, however, was busy today preparing for the exchange.

Juan W. Medina, who once was mayor of Juarez is in charge. It is expected that when Gen. Huerta, the government commander-in-chief, arrives in Juarez he will respect the neutrality of the vigilance body. The fact that a dynamiting crew of rebels was 113 miles south of here at Mochizuma today on the Mexican Central railroad had a tendency to contract the idea of an immediate evacuation of Juarez. It is believed that Gen. Pascual Orozco will await the return of this detail of men and the complete destruction of the railroad up to the international line before ordering the abandonment of the town. Gen. Orozco himself will go southwest to Casas Grandes, the new rebel capital and base.

ROOSEVELT PLATFORM WILL BE A CONTRACT

Colonel Says Platform of New Party Will Be Agreement to Undertake Certain Measures.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Oyster Bay, July 18.—The platform of the national progressive party is to be a "contract with the people," Colonel Roosevelt said today. Just as a business man signs a contract for the fulfillment of certain obligations the new party would sign a contract to undertake certain well defined measures provided the opportunity is accorded it. Col. Roosevelt has given his approval to the name National Progressive for the party. As the prospective nominee of the party, Col. Roosevelt is drafting a platform embodying his ideas which he will offer to the convention. He indicated he would use his influence to avoid the twin peril of ultra radicalism and vaguely concealed conservatism, and that he hoped the platform would be both practical and genuinely progressive.

ROSENTHAL MURDER MYSTERY UNSOLVED

New Clues Have Been Found, However, Affirming Suspicions in Connection With Police.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

New York, July 18.—Clues being slowly unearthed here and there indicated today an unfolding of the plot that led to the shooting down of Herman Rosenthal the gambler, who was killed early Tuesday a few hours before he was to make further revelations regarding his charges that the police grafted on gamblers. Louis Libbey and William Shapiro owners of the gray automobile which took the murderers to the scene of the shooting are said to be in possession of information which they propose to reveal to the district attorney that will indicate that the police system was responsible for the plot to make away with Rosenthal.

Meanwhile detectives are searching for Jack Rose, a gambler who is said to have hired the auto. Rose is said to be a friend of Lieut. Charles Becker, the police officer whom Rosenthal involved in his charges of police grafting. Neither Rose nor Itzke has been located.

Fruitless efforts were made early today to locate police Lieut. Becker, who left his home in the Bronx yesterday and since then has not been heard from by the police department or his friends. There were reports in police circles early today that Becker had made away with himself and every effort was made to get trace of him. Some of Becker's friends in the department say that it is not uncommon for him to absent himself from the office, for hours at a time without making any report to headquarters when running down clues on cases.

"Jack" Rose, wanted by the police in connection with the murder of Herman Rosenthal, an informer against the police, went to police headquarters this morning and was questioned for two hours by Deputy Commissioner Dougherty.

Rose, admitted Dougherty, said he was a passenger in the auto in which Rosenthal's murderers drove to the hotel Metropole, but said he left it before the shooting took place.

The deputy commissioner would not say whether Rose told who else was in the car when he left it. After the examination Rose was placed under arrest.

Rose gave himself up, the deputy commissioner said, after the latter had told "Bridget" Weber, arrested yesterday in the case, to find Rose and tell him to come immediately to headquarters.

"I am positive," said Dougherty later, "that I shall have the murderers of Rosenthal in custody before long, and I believe I know who did the shooting. Rose's statement to me does not implicate Lieutenant Becker. I believe Becker was entirely ignorant the murder was going to take place and all I ask in this case is fair play until the facts in the case are made known."

Police Commissioner Waldo and Police Lieutenant Becker appeared at the city hall shortly after noon today and went into conference with Mayor Gaynor.

Lieutenant Becker reported at police headquarters shortly before ten o'clock this morning. He declined to say where he had been during the night.

DEMOCRATS HAD FUND OF MILLION DOLLARS IN PARKER CAMPAIGN

W. F. Sheehan Testifying Before Senate Committee Says Money Was Spent To Good Effect.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 18.—The democratic campaign fund contained about $1,000,000 when Alton B. Parker ran for president in 1904, according to W. F. Sheehan of New York, who testified today before the senate committee investigating campaign funds.

Mr. Sheehan then was chairman of the democratic national executive committee. Money was sent by the committee, he said, to Maine, Colorado and Nebraska.

"To Maine, did you say?" asked the senate.

"Yes, with gratifying results to the democrats."

Mr. Sheehan said he remembered August Belmont was a large contributor that year and Senator Oliver asked if Thomas F. Ryan was a contributor in the same campaign.

Sheehan responded that he was. Mr. Sheehan wanted the committee to understand when he estimated the democratic funds in 1904 at one million dollars, he was not contradicting August Belmont, who "guessed" on the stand that the amount was $600,000 or $700,000.

"It's all a matter of memory," insisted Sheehan. "I think the national committee used directly about $800,000. I think there came through the committee some contributions for specific use in New York state. I have an impression they amounted to about $200,000."

The witness declared the committee made a rule at the beginning of the campaign to accept no money from any trust. He believed no such contributions were made directly or indirectly.

MONUMENT UNVEILED IN HONOR OF REBEL

State of Rhode Island Aims to Vindicate Thomas Wilson Dorr Who Was Condemned as a Traitor.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Providence, R. I., July 18.—With interesting exercises a monument erected in honor of Thomas Wilson Dorr, the leader of "Dorr's Rebellion," was the state of Rhode Island aims at a complete vindication of the man who once condemned as a traitor because he fought against the restriction of the right of suffrage to property owners.

Thomas Wilson Dorr was born in this city November 5, 1805. He was a man of property, capacity, education and social position. As a member of the legislature he started a popular agitation for suffrage reform. He opposed the old charter of Rhode Island because it allowed only limited suffrage. The state had retained its old charter, after the Declaration of Independence, and one of its provisions was that only those could vote who possessed a freehold worth $134.

The people considered this limitation most unjust and Dorr became their champion. So great was the unrest that civil war in Rhode Island seemed imminent. In 1841, at a mass meeting in Providence, the suffrage party under Dorr's leadership voted to call a state constitutional convention. The convention was held and a constitution was framed giving all men the right to vote. Under this constitution an election was held and Dorr was chosen governor. At the same time an election was held under the old charter and Samuel W. King was elected governor.

Both governments organized in Newport in May, 1842, and King proclaimed martial law, called out the militia and was recognized by the national government. Dorr was arrested, tried for high treason, found guilty and sentenced to imprisonment for life, but was pardoned in a few years.

Though Dorr was ridiculed and despised by his enemies his "rebellion" made such a deep public impression that the principles for which he and his followers contended were embodied in the Constitution of Rhode Island not long after Dorr's arrest.

Swartz had committed suicide by inhaling gas. The body was identified by Detective Joseph Brennan. Swartz had hired the room eight days ago under the name of Nat Hirsokowitz, from Max Kaplan. Early today Kaplan investigated he found Swartz in bed with the end of a gas tube that ran from the middle of the ceiling tied to his mouth. Examination by a hospital physician showed the man was dead. Written in lead pencil on his collar were the words, "I am guilty and insane."

There were several pieces of newspaper lying around and on one of these was written the sentence, "I was sorry the minute after I did it, so don't cry for me." A letter was found addressed to Swartz's mother in which he confessed his guilt and telling her not to cry her eyes out.

LIFE OF PRESIDENT WAS NOT ATTEMPTED

White House Officials Vigorously Deny Story That Bomb Was Received Through Mail.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Washington, July 18.—A circumstantial story of an attempt on the life of President Taft is being denied vigorously today early by White House officials and Chief Willard of the secret service. It was said that a bomb was received in a package at the executive offices and placed upon the desk of Sherman Allen, one of the White House assistant secretaries who has just been appointed assistant secretary of the treasury. The package was of course, intended for the president, but packages and letters never reach him without first passing through the hands of a secretary and Mr. Allen opened it. When Secretary Allen reached his desk at the White House this morning he denounced as absolutely untrue the published story of his having opened an infernal machine for the president.

"The thing is a complete hoax," he said, "there is not a word of truth in it. I haven't a burn on my hand from extinguishing the fuse." Mr. Allen held out two perfectly undamaged members to prove this statement. The published story declared he had been burned putting out the fuse.

"Moreover," continued Mr. Allen, "I do not open the mail. The whole thing is such an absurd hoax that I do not even intend to issue a statement denying it. I am disgusted. That's all I can say."

To personal friends Mr. Allen gave his word that he had opened no bomb and knew of none being received at the White House. Other officials backed up his denial.

MOTHER AGNES LUBY IS CALLED BY DEATH

One of Founders of St. Joseph's Convent and Most Beloved Sister, Died Last Evening.

In the death of Mother Agnes last evening Janesville lost one of its most notable and best beloved of women. After a useful and influential career of forty-two years as an unassuming Sister of Mercy, she has at last been called into the presence of her God, for whose honor and glory her last breath was spent.

The year 1870 witnessed the arrival in Janesville of three good Sisters whose work of mercy was to mean so much for the betterment of this part of the state. The death of Mother Agnes leaves but one of those pioneers of mercy still living—Sister M. Joseph. What those sisters and their faithful companions have accomplished in their unassuming way for the people of this section of the state, can be measured only in eternity.

The death of Mother Agnes brings to a close a life that was as beneficent as it was unassuming; as useful as it was successful. Her religious title, Mother, was in every respect a fitting one. Not content with carrying the burden of her official duties in the confines of the convent, her hand and her heart was ever open to the appeal of the needy and sorrowful. The ache of her own heart was never depicted in the countenance that encouraged those who were faltering. Happy in that cheerfulness that comes with well-spent life, she went down her own humble way through a life that leads only to God's holy presence.

Seven weeks ago ill-health forced her to leave her convent cell for the hospital, but it was with the same cheerfulness and resignation that characterized all her actions. There as elsewhere, the comfort of others was her first thought.

Born in the city of Cashel, County Tipperary, Ireland, she entered the order of the Sisters of Mercy in her early youth and spent her choicest years in the secluded service of God. For twenty-six years or more she carried the burdens of the large community as superior, until ill-health forced her to relinquish her task. Faithfully and well did she accomplish the work of guiding St. Joseph's convent from the days of its infancy to its present development. She gave her life for its service, and for God's glory, and she was ever cheerful in the giving.

The moment of her death was a surprise and a shock to people of all classes and convictions in this locality. In spite of the best of care and attention at the Sisters' hospital, Mother Agnes' one last wish was to return to her humble little cell in the convent in which she had lived for over forty-two years. Contrary to all professional advice she left the hospital on what all considered her death journey, and returned to the convent in order that she might die in the peacefulness of her convent home amidst the friends of her triumphs and labors and in the arms of her God. The old convent chapel bell was the music of her dying hour. She died as she desired and prayed to die, a burden and a care to no one. Self was not the object of her attention even in her last moments. Preparation for death—she needed none—her life was a continual preparation. Her works of charity and mercy are prominent only for the secrecy of their performance. Priests, sisters and people in all parts of the country have known the gentleness of her kindly ways, and the mercy of her long and useful convent life will merit for her the mercy of her God and Master.

The funeral service will be held in St. Patrick's church, Janesville, Saturday morning, July 20, at nine o'clock. The mass will be celebrated by her nephew, Rev. W. J. Luby. The remains will rest in the convent chapel in the care of the sisters until the time for the funeral.

Mother Agnes Luby, a member of one of the old Luby families of Tipperary, Ireland, leaves after her one sister, Sister Stanislaus Luby, who has been her faithful companion in convent life for many years. The other immediate relatives are four brothers, two living in Chicago, Mr. J. J. Luby and Mr. Patrick Luby—and two still in Ireland—Richard and John Luby.

EXHIBITS AT CITY HALL OF INTEREST TO PEOPLE.

Blue prints, photographs and drawings of safety appliances for machinery in the exhibit of the state industrial commission, which is being held in this city the rest of this month, have all been placed up for inspection, and are already attracting the attention of manufacturers and other employers of labor, and others. The commission has ordered that certain safety appliances be placed in factories around machinery where accidents are likely to happen, and the exhibit illustrates the safety appliances that are necessary. The exhibit is open throughout the day and in the evening. Lectures will be delivered here in the assembly room of the city hall next Wednesday by the three members of the industrial commission.

The Summer Shopper

By W. C. Kenaga.

She doesn't do as some of her sisters do, spend half a day down town without accomplishing much of anything.

She takes her Gazette to the cool veranda, finds a comfortable chair, and as she scans the store news of the day marks with a lead pencil the items in which she is interested.

Having finished the last page she resorts to her memorandum pad, lists the items she has checked and then reads the news columns.

In the morning she's ready bright and early for town. She starts her shopping soon after the stores open. She gets the best service that the stores can render, takes no unnecessary steps, and is back home before noon with plenty of time to rest before lunch.

The woman who reads advertisements gets more out of life than her sisters who do not.

TELEGRAPH QUICK AND CHEAP

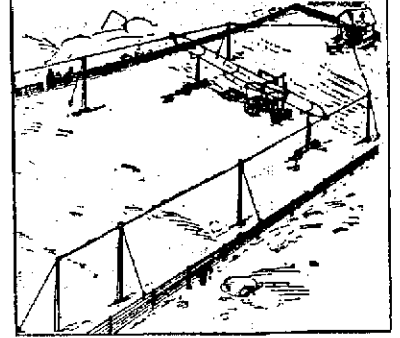

Johnson-Varley System of Communication Promises to Supersede Slow Morse Signalling.

A revolution is promised in the new Johnson-Varley system of tuned cable, wire, and wireless telegraphy. At a private press exposition its principles were clearly elucidated by Mr. Varley and Mr. Johnson. The system is based upon the well-known law of syntonism or synchronism. This supersedes the slow Morse signalling by a system of tuned reeds representing letters and numerals sent from a type keyboard and received at the other end by a similarly tuned type recorder. In all there are 49 differently tuned signals to each machine, and the whole of these range within one semitone. To show that the rate of vibration of these reeds is uninfluenced by variation of temperature a reed was placed in boiling water while the one that was tuned to it was kept out of the liquid, yet on vibrating the latter the former was seen to oscillate in a like manner. The advantages claimed for the new system are: 1. That messages can be sent four times as fast as by the Morse code with one transmitter. 2. Several transmitters can work at the same time over one cable in both directions. 3. Practical elimination of skilled operators. 4. As a result cheaper rates and increased speed. The Johnson-Varley system also makes possible secret wireless telegrams, and all interference of one message with another is prevented by its use. The tuning of the reeds—by a mechanical process, not the human ear—is absolute and definite, and we might say illimitable, as the fraction of a vibration per second makes all the difference in the world.

ELECTRICITY HANDY ON FARM

Montana Man Secures Patent on Apparatus for Operating Plows, Harrows and Other Implements.

Interest in the application of electricity to the farm recently manifested itself in a patent upon a system for distributing electricity to operate apparatus such as plows, harrows and other farm implements used in the fields. The patent is issued to Charles S. Doney, Columbus Falls, Mont., says the Popular Electricity. The illustration conveys something of the inventor's idea, which is to run wires out from the dynamo and on each side of the field. Across the field and between these two wires runs a pair of wires constituting a movable trolley from which a motor driven traction engine will take current by means of a second trolley, the whole outfit being moved up the field as the ground is prepared by the plows, harrows or drills.

FIFTIETH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY HELD

Rev. and Mrs. C. Lahr of Juda Were Married in Racine Fifty Years Ago Last Tuesday.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Juda, Wis., July 13.—Rev. and Mrs. C. Lahr were married at Racine, Wis., July 10, 1862. At the time of their marriage Rev. Lahr was serving a charge at Lansing Mission, Iowa, which was one of the four appointments of the circuit. After two years service at Lansing his next appointment was at Greenfield, Milwaukee county, Wis., Sharon, Beloit, Menomonie Falls, Hartford, Appleton, Black Wolf, Green Lake, Monroe and Juda. After three years' service at Juda he discontinued in active service as the elder here and has made this place his home since that time.

Prior to his marriage Rev. Lahr served as missionary in what was then part of the Iowa Conference in southern Minnesota. The first circuit he served on was the New Ulm circuit, the same comprising a district in southern Minnesota, and took 400 miles of travel to complete the circuit which in those days was a most arduous task, the country being but sparsely settled. This was just prior to the Indian uprising in that locality and in fact one of his associated missionaries and the one who succeeded him was killed during this Indian war.

Rev. and Mrs. Lahr had five children of which four are still living. Their son, William, died three years ago.

Umpires, attention! From henceforth you must treat James Esmond, shortstop of the Cincinnati Reds, with great respect and reverence. He may be an English lord, and if so you will have to address him as "Milord Esmond" from now on. Jimmy has been squinting up into his family tree,

H. H. Hilton, the English golf crack, will come to America this year to defend his title in the American golf championship at Wheaton, Ill. Making a wonderful spurt from eighth place the Fort Wayne club in the Central league now has the top position and looks like a winner in the pennant race. Starting with a double victory over Canton on June 18, the team won twenty-four of the next twenty-eight games. Unless something happens to stop them soon the pennant chase will become a walk-away.

He complains to President Chivington of that league, that Umpire Hayes of his staff grew careless in the use of his language the other day and abused him. Carr has some real blood in his eye, and declares if Chivington doesn't punish Hayes, he (Carr) will jump into the ring and do the punishing himself.

LOVE—IN THE STONE AGE AND TODAY

LANGFORD AND JEANNETTE TRAINING FOR THEIR FIGHT AT VERNON ON JULY 18

Joe Jeannette and Sam Langford.
Before his recent fight with Jim Ryan, Jack Johnson announced that after he got through with the Puello to whom he would be willing to meet all kinds of apes, black, white or otherwise, at the rate of one per week until all were vanquished. He included Sam Langford and Joe Jeannette in the list, declaring as to Langford, however, that he didn't like that fellow and wouldn't fight him for less than $30,000. This moment, of course, that Johnson wouldn't fight him at all, since no $30,000 crowd would ever get together to see the scrap. Johnson has recently declared that he doesn't care to meet either of his colored brethren of the ring before he retires. Jeannette and Langford are among the leading heavyweights of the present day.

OUTFIELDER VEACH TO INDIANAPOLIS

Antiquity of Hymns.
While hymns as we know them today are a comparatively recent innovation in church services, they are a very ancient institution and existed long before the Christian era. Many important collections of hymns date back to about five hundred years before Christ, though of course hymns existed long before that period. Among the collections which have come down to us from then are the Sanskrit, "Rig-Veda," a Chinese "Book of Odes," the "Buddhist Hymns," the Greek "Homer's Hymns," and the "Odes of Pindar." "The Latin Hymns," or hymns of the western church, date from the fourth to the twentieth centuries, while the "Lutheran Chorales" date from the sixteenth century. The hymns which play so prominent a part in the services of the modern Protestant churches were not in wide general use until about 1860.—Etuda.

Work of Art Damaged.
Vandals have damaged the bronze statue of Farragut, by Saint-Gaudens, in Madison square, New York City, by breaking off the sword straps. This statue is regarded as one of the sculptor's finest works, and the parts stolen, though small, will be difficult to replace.

New Use for Windmill.
An ingenious German baker utilizes a windmill to mix and knead his bread as well as to grind his grain into flour.

Unnecessary Advice.
A Boston school teacher, on attiring after 49 years' service, had these suggestions to make to young women teachers: "A little harmless flirting with nice people with whom you are acquainted will do much to rest the tired mind after the arduous duties of the schoolroom; be a live wire every minute; do not eat too much." Advice is given to those who need it; it is easy to guess what young Boston school teachers are like.

Beware of Laziness.
Burton, in his famous "Anatomy of Melancholy" says: "Laziness is poison to body and mind, the ailment of perverseness, one of the seven deadly sins; 'tis the devil's pillow, his bolster, his main support. A lazy dog is full of the mange, and how shall a lazy man not be otherwise? Laziness of mind is also much worse than laziness of body; an unused talent is a misfortune; and to the mind rust is a pest, a hell."

The Five Great Races.
In answer to the question, "What are the five great races of mankind?" a Chinese student replied, said Bishop Montgomery at the anniversary of the Society for the Propagation of the Gospel, reports the London Mail, "the hundred yards, the hurdles, the quarter mile, the mile and the three miles." In another paper a Chinese student said that "Out of sight, out of mind," could be explained in two words, "Invisible, insane."

COMBINATION HOTEL AND GARAGE PLANS ARE NOW PERFECTED

GEORGE DECKER PLANS EXTENSIVE IMPROVEMENTS ON PROPERTY HE RECENTLY PURCHASED.

ENTIRE NEW BUILDING

Will Be Constructed on Property Facing South Bluff Street To Be Used for Repair Shop and Storage Warehouse.

Within the next few months Janesville will have a modern up-to-date hotel of fifty rooms, with all improvements, and one of the largest and most commodious garage, repair shop and storage rooms in the state, according to plans just perfected by George Decker of the Janesville Motor Car Company.

Some months ago Mr. Decker purchased the old Parker Pen block from Thos. S. Nolan and planned extensive improvements at once. Delay in securing a leasehold of alley rights in the rear of the building caused him to change his plans and delayed the work of remodeling. Day before yesterday however Mr. Decker secured the property directly in the rear of his garage property, facing Bluff street and also secured a lease on a strip of land from the Schlitz Brewing company adjoining the building on the south and work of remodeling the entire structure will begin at once.

Aside from changing the front of the building, Mr. Decker plans to remodel the second and third stories, transforming them into a modern up-to-date European hotel. One flat of four rooms will be located facing Main street, which will be used by the managers of the hotel and there will be fifty rooms all light and airy, for transient or permanent occupation, fitted up with the most modern conveniences and furniture. Located as it is on Main street, adjacent to the Interurban and convenient to the garage, which will be located on the first floor, it will be a welcome addition to our city.

The first floor Mr. Decker plans to change almost entirely. At the north corner of the building he will construct a store 22 by 65 feet, facing Main street. South of this will be the office of the Janesville Motor Car company, with room for automobile sundries, entrance on Main street. The entrance to the garage will be further south and there will come the stairway to the hotel upstairs.

By securing the lease of six feet from the Schlitz company to the south, Mr. Decker will tear out the south wall of the rear of the present structure and enlarge the storage and display room of the garage to a fifty by nine-five floor space. All the iron posts will be removed and steel girders substituted, giving an entirely free floor space. It will be lighted by sky lights through the roof which will be a story and a half, as it is now, above the ground.

On the lot facing Bluff street Mr. Decker plans to erect a modern fireproof building forty-seven by ninety feet. Bluff street being thirteen feet and some inches above the level of Main street it will be possible to utilize the basement of this building for the repair shop of the garage, a run way connecting the Main street store and the Bluff street addition being on a level with the two. To the north of this building, is a permanent alley which will be utilized to run cars down to the repair shop without taking them through the Main street show room.

The upper floor of the new building will be on the level of Bluff street, and will be fitted up for an automobile warehouse and it is possible that a second story will be added with flats or office apartments. These may later be connected to the Main street building crossing the alley at the second floor.

Work of remodeling will start at once and will be rushed to completion during the next few months. When completed it will represent an expenditure of some thirty-five thousand dollars and will make one of the most commodious garage, repair shops and store fronts in the city. The plan for utilizing the two upper stories of the older building for a hotel will increase the city's facilities for handling crowds and be a welcome addition to Janesville.

ENDORSES NEWSPAPERS.

They Are the Best Advertising Medium, Says Coal Merchant.

Newspaper advertising received another endorsement last week when C. Frank Williams, delegate to the Pennsylvania Retail Coal Merchants' Association, in session at Reading, declared that when all other methods of publicity had failed he came back to the newspapers. He said in part:

"Advertising depends on localities. I have tried various ways of advertising to bring my business before the public, but in the end I have always gone back to the newspapers. I tried circulars, personal solicitation and post card methods, but none was as successful as the newspaper. Change your 'ad' from time to time and people will read it, especially if it is an attractive 'ad.' A whole lot depends on the 'ad.' I believe in that remark made by John Wanamaker several years ago, when he said that by advertising in newspapers a man received five times as much for his money as he could in any other way."

Must Prepare Bridal Dinner.

A quaint, old superstition in Iceland is that every bride must invite all her friends to a dinner in her own home, and every article of food must be prepared by the bride herself. If she is successful in pleasing her guests she not only receives praise for her own skill, but helps along her younger sisters, who are then assumed to be equally good at cooking, and consequently have a much better chance of getting married.

Armfield and a companion had jumped on the train just as it was leaving the depot, and just after it had passed the Academy street crossing Armfield lost his hat and in trying to reach it fell off the train. He tried to catch it again, but finding he could not, went into the St. Paul depot. "None Such"

DINNER STORIES

The late Sylvanus Miller, civil engineer, who was engaged in railroad enterprises in Central America, was seeking local support for a road, and attempted to give the matter point. He asked a native "How long does it take you to carry goods to market by muleback?" "Three days," was the reply. "There's the point," said Miller.

"With our road in operation you could take your goods to market and be back home in one day." Very good, senior," answered the native. "But what would you do with the other two days?"

John had accepted an invitation to dine with his friend Jones, and it being a very dark night and the roads bad, John took a stable lantern to light him on his way. They dined well, and John departed for home. The next morning John received a note from his friend as follows: "Dear Jack—The bearer brings your stable lamp, please return parrot and cage."

A young New Haven man, returning home from a health trip to Colorado, told his father about buying a silver mine for $3,000. "I knew they'd rope you in!" exclaimed the old man. "So you were as enough to buy a humbug mine." "Yes, but I didn't lose anything," I formed a company, and sold half the stock to a Connecticut man for $7,000. "You did," gasped the old man as he turned white. "I'll bet I'm the one who bought it." "I know you are," coolly observed the young man as he crossed his legs and tried to appear very much at home.

A well known Scottish architect was traveling in Palestine recently, when news reached him of an addition to his family circle. The happy father immediately provided himself with some water from the Jordan to carry home for the christening of the infant, and returned to Scotland. On the Sunday appointed for the ceremony he duly presented himself at the church, and sought out the beadle in order to hand over the precious water to his care. He pulled the flask from his pocket, but the beadle held up a warning hand, and came nearer to whisper: "No the noo, sir; no the noo! Maybe after the kirk's oot."

"I want somebody to show me where to unload this coal," said the grimy-looking man at the kitchen door.

"You needn't ask me about that," retorted the young woman. "I don't have anything to do with unloading coal; I'm the kitchen lady." "I can't help that," he rejoined. "I'm the coal gentleman and the father of three kitchen ladies, one laundry lady, and one chamber lady, and if you don't show me where to put this coal I'll call the woman of the house."

"I'll show you, sir," she humbly replied, and led the way to the coal cellar.

Mr. Holloran surveyed the insurance agent with a dark and hostile countenance. The fact that one eye was concealed by a somewhat grimy bandage did not add to the attractiveness of his expression.

"Haven't you made up your mind yet to insure with us?" inquired the agent. "You told me I might call again in a few days."

"There was two of you at me to get an accident insurance policy," said Holloran, breathing heavily. "I told you and him both you might call in again, and he come first, day before yesterday, and I insured wid his company."

"That very night I met up wid Barney Casey on the way home, which was what I was expecting to happen," continued Mr. Holloran, raising himself by grasping the arms of his chair with two capable although scarred hands, "and whin we'd finished wid one another I was like this!"

"Yesterday morning I sent for the insurance chap, and says I to him: 'Look at me, I says, and estimate the damages and pay them.'"

"He squirmed right out o' the door, saying 'twas no accident I'd had."

"Now, if meeting wid Barney Casey, after keeping out of his way for six months is no accident, I'm done wid insurance companies, and the sooner you lave this house the better 'twill please me."

Ready. The Rev. Mr. Gude—"Isn't there some one here who will help us keep up interest in the church?" Deacon Tightwad (suddenly awakening—"I for one am prepared to raise the rates to eight per cent. on chattel mort gages if the other money lenders in the congregation will co-operate."

Fads and Fashions

New York, July 16.—Women's fashions are at present in a state of transition and the result is that at present, a greater variety of styles may be seen than for many years. The pannier has been made to serve as name for a host of drapery movements that have little in common with the original pannier and there is a prevailing impression that the lower on the skirt this drapery movement is introduced the less does it detract from the slenderness of the silhouette. With some figures this is true, but oddly enough it is often the shorter and more bouffant pannier drapery that gives the impression of slenderness, provided the wearer's figure does approximate slenderness. The underskirt or main body of the skirt is clinging, narrow, limp, and the short panniers are so evidently extraneous, stuff put on without regard for figurelines, that they do not distract the eye from the real outlines.

Even where flounces are much in evidence the makers often rely upon this same theory, and instead of carrying the flounces all the way round the skirt, allow the unbroken line of the clinging skirt foundation to appear in front or at the sides. Occasionally among the latest French models one sees odd illustrations of such treatment, things piquant in themselves but exacting much of the wearer.

There was, for example, a frock in white chambray. The front of the skirt was plain and clinging. The back breadth was plain and unbroken in line, but full. On each side four rather deep flounces of very fine, soft lace were set on overlapping each other, the uppermost flounce starting under the girdle, the lowest one ending just above the knee. Below the flounces the skirt sides were straight, the lower part of the skirt being as narrow as that of the ordinary frock of last winter. There were long sleeves with lace frills, a lace frill collar and on the front of the bodice a simple embroidery motif in clear green. The soft lace flounces of this costume gave much the same lines as subdued side panniers.

One French designer has a liking for flounce arrangements in the back of the skirt and the idea works out prettily in some instances, though sitting down in such a skirt is likely to muss the flounces unless they are of some lace such as Alencon which does not crush readily.

An interesting example of such flounce treatment occurred in a garden party frock of fine dotted muslin over which was a tunic of lettuce green netting. The front breadth of the softly full untrimmed muslin skirt was uncovered, but most of the bodice was of satin, and below a green velvet girdle tied in a Japanese bow at the back a clinging overskirt of satin fell straight to the floor at the sides and in the back. On this satin tunic were set two very deep flounces of Alencon, beginning low at the sides and running up in points at the middle of the back, the upper flounce point rising to the waist line. Lace trimmed the bodice falling over an inset front of the muslin.

Frequently panniers and bodice in pannier models are in material different from that of the narrow skirt, and sometimes panniers and trains are of one material over a contrasting underskirt. In such a case the panniers may disappear under a train that is merely a full breadth or wide box plait separate from the skirt or may merely melt in jabbing folds into a flouncing train or may be knotted in a graceful way low on the train.

Low pannier and other draperies above sun-pleated flounce of some soft sheer material such as tulle, lace or marquisette are often seen, the flounce falling so straight and soft that it gives the skirt bottom no more suggestion of width than attaches to a plain skirt.

Fine cottons are having an unusual vogue abroad and there are many novelties among them. A cotton resembling the tissue sponge, a very sheer fine version of organdy which is enormously popular is attractive and many of the lace or mercerized cottons of high class are altogether lovely, retaining their lustre even after laundering.

Most of these fine cottons are expensive, often quite as expensive as corresponding sheer silks and woolsens, but they are ideal summer stuffs and the frocks made from them are suitable even for the most formal afternoon functions. Much open work embroidery on linen or batiste is used, the handsomest lingerie frocks often being made almost entirely in this fashion with trimmings of heavy lace, and a muslin frock a jour with tulle of colored chiffon or silk muslin or with a coat of silk is as smart as garden party toilet as one could wish.

Taffeta continues to claim first place among the summer silks and it is said that its vogue, at least so far as house and evening wear are concerned, will hold over into the winter.

"I see you got your washing out early this morning!"

There is no more graceful adjunct to the summer costume than the scarf, when it is properly manipulated. The scarf, as a summer wrap, is as fashionable as ever, for it has been found to be an indispensable item of the wardrobe. It is not used with tailored street costumes of serge or linen, with tub morning frocks or with short skirted outing frocks; but with trailing evening gowns and the type of afternoon costume that is worn upon semi-formal occasions it is ideal.

The longer the scarf is the more easily and gracefully may it be managed, and if the weights in the ends are properly adjusted, so much the better. Very pretty bridge scarfs for summer piazza wear are made of flowered silk, weighted at the ends with silver tassels. Such a scarf, drawn about the shoulders over a thin lingerie frock, will afford still enough protection when sitting still over the bridge table, out of doors, and will also make a very becoming accessory of the costume.

Embroidered glove silk scarfs are also charming for afternoon piazza wear. These scarfs are made of very soft, supple silk and have a texture like the long silk gloves worn with summery frocks. These scarfs come in lovely subdued colorings and in white and some of them are embroidered across the ends in harmonizing colors.

Evening scarfs of maline or tulle are the summer craze in Paris. These scarfs are selected to form a harmonizing note with the color scheme of the costume, and when a great couturier makes the selection the effect is apt to be exquisitely beautiful and artistic.

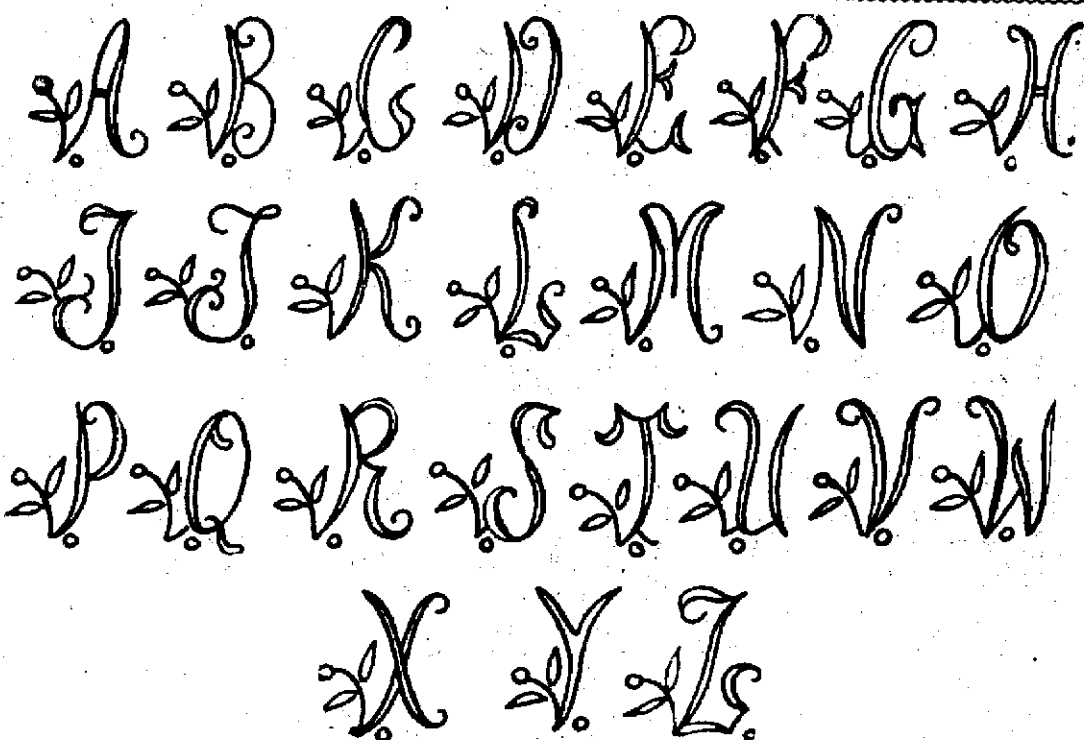

Lace blouses are worn, but they are no longer veiled with chiffon, although trimmings, collars and revers of chiffon, usually black, are allowed. Roses of satin ribbon are modish for trimming the corsage or girdle. Those fashioned from two shades of pink or two shades of red are extremely pretty.

The bell or pagoda parasol is one of the few distinct novelties of the season.

CLOSE RELATION BETWEEN GAMBLERS AND POLICE, SAYS N. Y. DISTRICT ATTORNEY

Lieut. Charles Becker.

New York.—That there is a close and sinister relation between the gamblers and the police force of this city, is the assertion of District Attorney Whitman.

"I accuse the police department of New York, through certain members of it, with having murdered Herman Rosenthal," he says. "Either directly or indirectly, it was because of them that he was slain in cold blood with never a chance for his life."

New York is stirred as it has not often been before over the sensational murder of Rosenthal on the eve of the day when he had promised to offer evidence of the district attorney to prove that the police and the gamblers of this city are in an unholy alliance. The police force, it is declared, is more on trial than the individuals who are held for the murder.

On the day before the murder, Rosenthal, in an interview with the district attorney, had given considerable information concerning gambling conditions, and among other things declared that officer Lieutenant Becker had figured in the levying of tribute in the gambling district.

In investigating the case, detectives have questioned Lieutenant Becker as to his whereabouts at the time of the murder. It is noted as an interesting coincidence that Becker wound up his business downtown and was motoring up to his home in the Bronx on the night of the tragedy just as the forces that were to mean the end of Herman Rosenthal were converging upon the Hotel Metropole, where the murder was executed.

The gambler, informer was already at the hotel and the car that carried his assassins must have been headed that way when Becker's car passed up Broadway a few feet from the scene of the murder not more than twenty minutes before it took place.

District Attorney Whitman has left no doubt in the minds of New Yorkers that he will make the most thorough and searching investigation into the alleged corrupt relation between police and New York gamblers. "I intend to put my whole office to the work of getting at the bottom of this thing," he says. "It is my duty to prove to the people that justice is not to be blocked or frightened by terrorists, whether from within the police department or from without."

SOCIETY WOMAN ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Mrs. Rene B. Morrow.

Mrs. Rene B. Morrow, society woman, is on trial in Chicago, charged with the murder of her husband, Gem-laden and richly gowned women and men of every class crowd the court room to hear the evidence. Mr. Morrow was found dead at his home one day last winter with a bullet hole through his head. The state is trying to prove that Mrs. Morrow did the shooting. The defendant claims that Morrow committed suicide.

Fewer Fogs in London.
Efforts of the Coal Smoke Abatement society, in greatly reducing the volume of smoke, have been instrumental in making black fogs rare in London. A few years ago these fogs were quite frequent in London in winter, and for several days at a time the city itself and the outlying suburbs were covered by a dark, black pall, sometimes high in the air, but more frequently descending and forming a thick, dirty and greenish-yellowish substance through which the people had to travel. Fogs still occur in London, but only occasionally, and not for several years has there been an old-fashioned fog when torch-bearers had to be employed to indicate the way.

They Eat Much Meat.
The people of the south are large meat consumers, but small meat producers. Statistics show that southern consumers consume more meat per capita than any other section of the country. FOREIGN STUDENTS GET BOOK

Latest Dictionary Aids Many Embryo Americans—Use Savings and Coupons.

Almost as noticeable as the high class of business and professional men who are taking advantage of The Gazette's generous offer of the New Websterian 1912 Dictionary, Illustrated, for six coupons clipped from consecutive issues of this paper, as a distinguished feature of the steady stream of persons carrying away books from the Dictionary Department, is the number of foreign residents who are anxious to get the book.

This is the book that will aid foreigners in learning the language of the country of their choice. In this "mellin's food" the dictionaries are destined to play no small part in making American of the strangers within our gates.

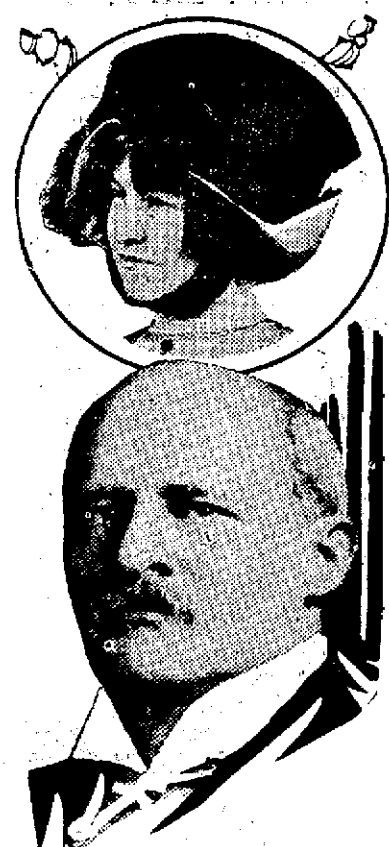

Of course most foreigners can speak and write the language to a considerable degree before feeling the need of an English dictionary, but the many pictures, colored charts and simply worded explanations and definitions of the New Websterian are a great aid in making progress in a language which is said to be most difficult to comprehend.

If you have ever noticed the Greek, Italian or Slavish boys piddling through their lesson books and acquiring by constant effort a knowledge of English you will realize how much in earnest the foreigners, young and old, are who are invading the Dictionary Department and exchanging their coppers and coupons for covered copies of the book which they know means much to them.

This Dictionary is NOT published by the original publishers of Webster's Dictionary or by their successors.

It has been revised and brought up to the present date in accordance with the best authorities from the greatest universities, and is published by a well known publishing company of New York City.

WANTS CONGRESS TO BUY MONTICELLO

Mrs. Martin Littleton and Representative Jefferson Levy.

Mrs. Martin W. Littleton, wife of the congressman from New York, is carrying on a campaign to induce congress to appropriate money for the purchase of "Monticello", the home of Thomas Jefferson. The place is now owned by Congressman Jefferson Levy. Mrs. Littleton says that the place is run down and that tall grass and weeds hide the grave of the father of Democracy. Mr. Levy declares that the place is in good condition and says that it is not for sale at any price.

Still the Open Kettle.

Develop Individuality.
Care should be taken in the large family that each child develops an individuality, says the London Sketch. Sometimes, especially in the case of girls, it is a good idea to send children to different schools. This seems an extreme measure, but is worth the consideration of the parents who find that their brood are dropping into slovenly habits of speech, into codes and rules of their own, and a general contempt and disregard of the rest of the world.

In these days of high cost of living, a medicine that gets a man up out of bed and able to work in a few days is a safe and valuable remedy. John Heath, Michigan Bar, Cal., says: "I had kidney and bladder trouble for nearly six years, and was confined to my bed, unable to turn without help. Soon after I commenced using Foley Kidney Pills and was relieved at once." His example is worth following. Foley Kidney Pills will do for others just as much as they have done for John Heath. SICCOLINE

A Sure Remedy for Moths, Cockroaches and Bed-bugs.

Mrs. C. F. Randle, Beloit, Wis., has been troubled with moths in one of the closets of her house for years, and could not get rid of them. This Spring she sprayed every crack and crevice with Siccoline, and she says there is not a sign of a moth.

Mrs. R. A. Johnson, of Beloit, Wis., had a fine high priced plush couch that the moths got into and were spoiling it. She sprayed it once with Siccoline and never saw a moth afterwards.

Supt. D. M. Barlass, at the County Farm, says Siccoline does the work to perfection.

Mr. Julius Hittman, Proprietor of the Edelweiss Cafe, Milwaukee, says that Siccoline kills the roaches in every stage including their eggs.

OLD FLAME REVIVIFIED BREAKS UP HOME AND LEADS TWO TO DISASTER

Mrs. Pearl Shrontz and Robert Warrington.

A schoolboy romance, that was blighted by a lovers' quarrel, that smoldered through six years of a woman's married life, only to burst into flame when she and her former sweetheart met again, and that finally resulted in her desertion of her home and husband and an elopement with her childhood lover, came to light in San Francisco recently when Mrs. Pearl Shrontz and Robert Warrington were arrested in a cottage in that city. In 1906 Mrs. Shrontz, who was then Pearl Raue, was married to Dr. W. E. Shrontz. The couple lived happily at Xenia, O. A few weeks ago, however, Mrs. Shrontz met Warrington, her school-day lover, and the old love proved stronger than marriage vows. They eloped to San Francisco where they

SAYS COMMISSIONS ARE NOT EXPENSIVE

Secretary Frear Defending State Disbursements Says Actual Cost of State Commissions is Small.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Rice Lake, Wis., July 18.—The total expense of all the state commissions in Wisconsin, apart from the service they render the state, is approximately not more than three per cent of all the annual disbursements. The saving in freight charges to the people each year through the state railway commission would pay the expenses of all the commissions for several years.

This was stated by Secretary of State James A. Frear in an address here last night in which he considered the question of state expenditures. He said:

"During the past ten years not one dollar in taxes has been levied for state administrative purposes, but on the contrary the state through remission and otherwise has been called upon to pay out of the treasury moneys to run educational institutions of the various counties and other charges which are properly local in character."

Expenditures Doubled.

"The state expenditures increased from $4,026,997 in 1900 to $9,782,459 in 1910, or during a period of ten years it more than doubled, although during a part of that time the state taxes were remitted because of large treasury receipts. Of these expenditures the total administrative charges of all commissions, state departments and every other administrative branch of the state increased about $356,000, but the moneys collected through additional fees in the insurance department alone in 1910 practically paid every dollar of state administrative expense that year, including the expense of all the commissions. Expressed another way, the increase in railway taxes brought about by the state tax commission, which approximates over $700,000 in annual increase, pays all administrative state expenses, without doing an injustice to the railways."

Secretary Frear also noted that 23 per cent of the total expenditures in 1910 were paid back to the counties for common schools, leaving the amount of state disbursements aside from this refund at $7,536,459. About 40 per cent of the state expense was for educational purposes during the ten year period from 1900 to 1910, or three-quarters of a million dollars more than the total expenses for 1890.

No Place for Cut.

"I am willing to compare the work of the state department and of other state offices with the work of private commercial companies and feel sure that the state work will not suffer by comparison. Now wherein is there extravagance in expenditures? Will you cut down educational work? Will any political party advocate reducing the 40 per cent expense for schools, 20 per cent of which is directly paid back to the county? Will you cut down the support of the insane and other state charges? Legislators from all political parties voted for these expenditures. Will you stop work on the state capital? Will you hamper the courts by a reduction? Will you take away appropriations from county fairs that have increased more than any other item with one or two exceptions? Will you cut down the killing of tubercular cattle? This item has increased from $3,537 to $83,792, or nearly tenfold, within the ten years? Members from all the parties have voted for these expenditures. I am not defending every act of the legislature, but with all the items placed before the public regularly each year what expenditure should be reduced?"

State a Clearing House.

"Wisconsin is spending more money, but Wisconsin is a great state. Much of the money which is disbursed by the state is for county purposes and is paid directly back to the counties, the state merely acting as a clearing house. Of the states with populations comparing with ours in 1910, California spent $13,465,000; Michigan $12,289,000; Minnesota $11,257,000; and Wisconsin $9,782,000."

"When claims of extravagance are made it is well to have the critic point out just what expenditures should be stopped and then if he will enter the legislature his efforts may meet with more effective results than through press columns. Wisconsin gets as good or better return for the money expended than the average state, and a careful study of the subject is invited by state officials."

When John Played Ashman

JOHN was feeling down-hearted. The man whom he had engaged to cart the ashes from the cellar had, after many weeks' delay finally appeared, but had only about half done the work. Dolly insisted that the ashes left must be taken out, as she could not have such a messy-up cellar; and she had hinted that it wouldn't be much work for John to do it himself.

John loathed ashes. The one task of his life that he most detested was taking up the ashes when he fixed the heater on winter mornings. The prospect of delving in ashes was therefore not heartening.

And so he sat disconsolate.

"Why didn't you watch him," he said to Dolly, "and see that he took them all?"

"I never thought of it. Besides Mrs. Osborne came over to show me the new centerpiece she is embroidering, and I couldn't leave her for the ashman."

"Oh, of course not. It's more important to look at an embroidery do-doodle than to see that work's done right."

"But it wouldn't be much trouble to take those few ashes out, dear, if you just get at it."

"After a man works all day at the office, he doesn't want to come home and work half the night."

"But dear, it really won't take you long."

John rose with a sigh. With the face of a martyr, he removed his coat and collar. With the air of one going to his final end, he grabbed the ashcan, and departed for the cellar. From the depths came sounds of scraping and shoveling and intervals of silence. Finally, Dolly went to the back door to see how the work was progressing. She gave a gasp of dismay.

"Why, John!" she exclaimed. "You oughtn't to throw them over Osborne's lot."

"Where will I throw them?"

"Why-er-I don't know. But that will never do."

"It's a vacant lot."

"That doesn't make any difference. If they ever build, they'd have to remove them. John, dear, really, you ought to climb over the fence and take them up."

What John said was unprintable.

John sat a long time on the upturned ashcan, pondering the compensation of married life. He thought longingly of flats and apartments, where ashes were unknown, and he decided a man was a fool to live in a suburb where ashes were not collected. Then at last, he climbed the fence and shovelled the ashes back.

"Where will I put them?" he demanded of Dolly, coming into the living room where she was embroidering.

"Now that it's dark, you might take them down the street and spread them around on those vacant lots down there."

"Well, by heck! If that isn't logic for you," exploded John. "I can't put them on the lot next door, but I can carry them a mile down the street and spread them on lots there."

"But we don't know the people who own those lots," said Dolly, "and we do know Osbornes."

"And you call that a reason!"

"But dear, can't you see—"

"No, I can't. To me a lot is a lot. But being your obedient husband, I'll do what you say."

When finally he came in, clothed and in his right mind, Dolly slipped an arm around his neck, and kissed him sweetly. "It was a nasty job and you were a dear to do it. Where did you put them?"

But John vouchsafed no answer.

Heart and Home Problems

MRS. ELIZABETH THOMPSON

Dear Mrs. Thompson: A young man in my town seems interested in me and every time I go anywhere he tries for my company, but I can't bear the thoughts of him. What would you advise me to do?

WORRIED GIRL.

Arrange to go with somebody else each time and be very cool to him if he insists upon intruding.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am only fourteen years old. There are several boys here and one of them I would appreciate the company of very much. Do you think I am too young to keep company?

YOUTH.

You are too young for a beau, little girl. Just be good friends with the boys.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: What is a suitable birthday present for a young lady?

FRED.

Flowers, candy, a book, gloves, belt buckle, hair ornament, cardcase.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—How can I have a plump face? Mine is small and thin. (2)—How can I get rid of gray hairs? Shall I pull them out? I am only twenty-three.

(3)—Is it any harm to wash in hot water every night? Is talcum powder harmful? ANXIOUS.

You can't make a small face large. To plump it, massage it gently every night and morning with pure cold cream—the massage does it. Wipe off cream when finished. Treat the neck this way also. Wear loose collars. Eat nourishing foods. Take deep breathing exercises and be outdoors all you can. (2)—Sage tea will darken the hair slightly and nourish it also. Rub a little vaseline into the scalp around the roots of gray hairs. Massage the scalp and brush your hair well every night. Let it hang loose as much as possible. (3)—Dash with cold water after washing in hot water. Talcum is not harmful.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: Can a young man regain the affection of a young lady who has ignored him following a quarrel?

CLARENCE W.

Go to her, tell her you are sorry for your part of the quarrel and say that you'll be more careful not to err again if she will be friends with you once more.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: The family where I live is very fond of greens and they thought rape was so much like cabbage that it would be all right to cook for greens. Would it be poisonous? BLUE EYES.

I never heard of rape for greens. Don't you mean kale? This is very good, and is something like cabbage.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: (1)—I am a girl seventeen years old. I am five feet, three inches, and my bust is too large for the rest of me. What can I do to reduce my bust? (2)—Can you tell me what Kill Kall means? Is it a French name? V. A. S.

(1)—Leave your bust alone. My dear, you are apt to injure yourself seriously by trying to reduce it. Besides, a large bust is pretty, and you probably have not got your full growth yet, so there is a probability that you will catch up to the bust, if it seems too large now. (2)—I do not recognize the name you gave.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Vegetables should not be canned at home until the first of September, at the earliest, for several reasons. One is that vegetables canned now do not keep through the hot weather of August. Any farmer's wife will tell you the same. "Don't put up garden stuff before or during 'dog days,'" is frequently heard by those who have acquaintances among the market people. Another reason is that vegetables will be even lower in price the first two weeks of September than now, and still another consideration is that the weather will be cooler and the work of canning less arduous.

However, there is one exception to the rule—beets—they are plentiful now and lower in price than they will be for another year. They are more nutritious than carrots or turnips and compare favorably with potatoes in point of nutriment.

Young beets are sweet, tender and full of flavor; later they will be stringy and insipid. They keep in storage through the winter, but it is desirable to can and pickle some for home use just now.

Cut off the tops and wash the beets with great care; do not scrape or cut them or they will "bleed" losing their rich juices and fine color. Boil in plenty of water for an hour or two, according to size and age; ascertain when they are tender by pressing on the thickest part with the finger; never prick them with a fork.

When done, cool them; rub off the skin and remove any unsightly places; pack into Mason jars, whole or sliced, and cover with boiling water. Put the filled jars into the canner or boiler or steam cooker and let them boil for forty minutes; tighten the lids, cool and tighten again.

A pinch of soda added to each jar of beets with the boiling water is said by those who have tried it to keep the beets from bleaching in the can.

If pickled beets are wanted make a mixture of water, sugar and vinegar boiled together in place of the water. If half-gallon jars are used increase the time of boiling.

Small, tender beets may be boiled as directed and dressed with white cream sauce or with drawn butter. They are delicious to serve with roast beef. A cream dressing made with a cup of cream heated and thickened with one egg yolk and season with salt and cayenne will be liked.

Baked beets are usually served with salt fish; it is said this combination was a favorite one with Charles Dickens. However this may be, the flavor is so satisfying that they hear the stamp of approval.

Select beets of uniform size, scrub them without breaking the skin and bake in a pan containing a little water. Skin, slice and cover, when done, with a mixture of melted butter, vinegar, salt and pepper.

More beets are being cultivated now than ever before for table consumption. Its growing popularity may be due to the improved varieties for sugar-making. Beet sugar now competes on a nearly equal footing with the cane sugars of the world from the tropics to the temperate zones. The student finds that strange vicissitudes in the history of nations have been fostered in the perfecting of beet sugar. The sugar bounties of the Napoleonic wars and the emancipation of slavery in the British colonies are examples of temporary checks to the cane sugar industry that made it possible to perfect the chemical process of beet sugar-making.

Male and Female Intellect.

"Fit the same intellect to a man, and it is a bow-string—to a woman and it is a harp-string. She is vibrant and resonant all over, so she stirs with slightest musical tremblings of the air about her."—The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

HERE are so many things—best things—that can come when youth is past, that it may well happen to many of us to find ourselves happier and happier to the last.

FAVORITE FRUIT DISHES.

Next to the taste and palatability of our food, we like to have it appeal to the eye. Food nicely served and daintily garnished will be much more appetizing than that which is served carelessly.

A luscious basket of fruit garnished with its own leaves, when possible, is an ornament to any table.

For those who cannot eat uncooked apples or pears, here is a dainty dish to set before them: Stew the fruit in a rich syrup until tender enough to pierce easily, then decorate with quarters of blanched almonds, dust with powdered sugar and return to the oven to finish baking with the syrup poured around them. The almonds will be roasted and the fruit delicious. Serve with whipped cream. If pears are used a little lemon juice in the syrup is an addition.

When fresh fruit is not obtainable, mold a few preserved strawberries in an orange jelly, and serve the quivering mounds with whipped cream and a little of the preserves.

Halves of muskmelons filled with cream and garnished with small pieces of candied ginger to simulate seeds is both palatable and pretty. Roasted almonds may be used in place of the ginger.

Cored apples filled with a mixture of nuts and marmalade and then covered with a meringue is another way of serving apples.

Grated apple added to the white of an egg and powdered sugar beaten until stiff and served surrounded with a thin custard is an acceptable dessert.

Stewed pears cored and the cavities filled with jelly, served with whipped cream, is another worthy of a trial.

Peaches put through a sieve, until thoroughly fine, added to ice cream with a little almond flavor, is delicious.

Halves of ripe peaches filled with chopped nuts in the cavity where the pit was removed, heaped with sweetened and almond-flavored whipped cream, is still a favorite though not new. Place the peach on a round of sponge cake and call it a peach caviar.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

A FOOLISH POSE.

LOVE that asketh love again.
Finds the barter naught but pain;
Love that giveth in full store,
Aye receives as much and more.

Love, exacting nothing back,
Never knoweth any lack;
Love, compelling love to pay,
Sees him bankrupt every day."

—Michael Field.

Do you know her—the girl who thinks it smart and attractive to parade the love some luckless man feels for her; tell you "how perfectly wild about her" he is; expatiate on his devotion, and, at the same time, assure you that she cares absolutely nothing for him?

Of course you do. We all do.

She lives in every town, in every neighborhood—I had almost said on every street.

It seems to me that this attitude is one of the most unpleasant, as well as one of the most universal, faults of the young woman of the present day.

Perhaps of the young women of yesterday. I'm not saying they were any better. Only I just wasn't acquainted with them.

To love is the greatest thing in the world.

To be loved is only secondary.

The greatest tragedy in life isn't not to have inspired love, but not to have loved.

The beautiful woman who drives half a dozen men half wild with love, and never once feels the stirring of it within herself, seems to me a greater failure in life than the girl who secretly loves her heart out for the man who never even knows.

The power of love inspired has never stood back of any great work, while the power of love felt, even when unreturned—perhaps more often under this condition—has been the motive power of much of the greatest work of the world.

When will our girls realize these facts and cease to think it something to be proud of when men love them and they are unable to feel in return the stirring of that wonderful self-obliterating thing—genuine love?

Dora Melegari, a Russian philosopher, makes a whimsical, but thought-provoking, little guess about this strange attitude.

"Perhaps it is because, being conscious of our own unworthiness, we despise others instinctively for the love they give us," she suggests.

Perhaps that is what actuates this kind of girl, although I doubt very much if she would admit it she were taxed with it.

But the strangest thing about this girl who assures you so vigorously that she cares nothing for this man who is "so wild about her" is the fact that half the time she is telling you a lie.

Half the time she DOES care for him, only with that same perverse belief that it is finer to inspire love than to feel it, she likes to pretend that she doesn't.

Silly little girl.

I could almost find it in my heart to wish that her folly might lose her the precious jewel she holds so lightly—a mutual love.

Ah, no, I couldn't quite wish that—only that it might bring her to the brink of loss and teach her to cherish this priceless treasure as it should be.

Ancient and Modern Words.

"The word appendicitis was considered too rare and obscure for inclusion in the Oxford Dictionary. Scullery is not related to scullion, nor sentinel to sentry, while cipher is the same word as zero, and jilt is identical with Juliet. Bunkum and spruce are geographical names, but brass wood is not named from Brazil. A hearse was once a rake and a water a honeycomb."—The "Romance of Words," by Prof. Ernest Weekley.

Summer colds are hard to get rid of, and frequently lead to asthma, bronchitis, and hay fever. Do not let your cold get a hold on you, but use Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for quick relief. W. H. Allen, Chelsea, Wis., says: "We prefer Foley's Honey and Tar Compound to other cough medicines because it quickly cures coughs and colds. It will ward off a cold if taken in time." Contains no opiates. Is safe for children. Remember the name, Foley's Honey and Tar Compound and accept no substitute. Badger Drug Co.

"But lo! and behold! When I go to a soda grill (that's what they call it now) these days for a sandwich and a bit of something cool (it's all the luncheon you want on hot days), I've got to be there mighty early if I expect to get a seat. It isn't women who occupy the great majority of seats, either. It's men, eating Jap Sueys and Lovers Lane, or sucking up through a straw a Boston Flip or a Manhattan Rickey, or maybe a Texas Rouler. They do it perfectly shamelessly, too, looking at a woman as if she was a sort of intruder when she wants a chance to get some of the good stuff herself.

"And if you'll watch the women at these soda grills, you'll see that they nearly always get something substantial before they eat their five cents' (luncheon price only) worth of ice cream or get a five-cent soda. But the men—bless you—the men wade right into the expensive sandwiches and fancy soft drinks and think nothing of spending a quarter—just like that!

"Well, it's better than going to a saloon, and I certainly have no objection to men eating and drinking the things we learned to appreciate first. But they needn't make fun of us any more because of our liking for ice cream sodas, or cetera. Hereafter, if any man invites me to partake, I'll know he isn't making any sacrifice for me, but that probably he's more anxious for it than I am, and I'll act accordin'."

"No gentlemen would sit in a public car with his legs crossed," said a Brooklyn magistrate the other day. Then he fined a man for doing it, because said man's muddy shoes had damaged the dress of a woman who sat beside him.

There are plenty of men in this world who are not gentlemen, according to this magistrate's definition.

In seeking this own comfort, or in impressing upon others their entire independence of everything and everybody, this class of men makes riding in a street car a misery for any woman unfortunate enough to be in juxtaposition.

DIET IN PREGNANCY.

Mrs. A. W., who asks for advice on what to eat during pregnancy, will find several hints of interest if she will go through a file of the paper. What to think is no less important in the case than what to eat. There is evidence to show that the trend of Mr. Edison's genius was influenced strongly during his pre-natal period of development. Most, if not all of the deep-seated idiosyncrasies for food are hereditary, as suggested in the Biblical phrase, "the parents ate sour grapes and the children's teeth are set on edge." The food should be non-stimulating, nourishing and simple. Dr. Alice B. Stockham, who has given this subject special study, recommends a diet consisting largely of rice (unpolished). I have reported a case in which a monodiet of soaked and simmered wheat was followed with remarkably good results; this could be alternated with rice and milk. No sudden change should be made in the diet. As already suggested, cravings should not be persistently ignored, but should be controlled by suggestion as far as possible, without worry or undue effort. Regular, gentle physical exercise is important, walking being the best, supplemented with movement exercises already given. Each case has some peculiarities, which need to be considered.

PROPER CARE FOR STRAWBERRY BEDS

George J. Kellogg Tells What to do With Strawberry Beds Now That Vines Have Ceased Bearing.

In a letter written to the Gazette George J. Kellogg, who has written a number of helpful articles for gardeners, tells how to care for the strawberry beds after the vines have ceased bearing. His letter is as follows:

As soon as berries are picked, then what you going to do to the old bed? If you have a garden, and only a small bed, and want to keep it over; if it is matted and full of weeds and white clover, then give you nice returns last month, then space up three feet wide and leave a foot of vines. Do this across the rows, rake it nicely, put down all the runners and cover the bed with well rotted manure. Then cut all old vines where too thick, and all weeds. If your bed has been kept on narrow rows, as it should have been, lay the runners back, space up the paths leaving narrow rows of vines digging out some of the oldest plants, put down the runners and cover with manure.

The best way is to set a new bed every spring on ground where you had potatoes the year before, then when old beds get too grassy space it under and set out celery; sometimes I have just mowed an old bed and let it go to grass, and often it will astonish me and bear a good lot and needs no winter mulch and comes early.

I have often said I could grow berries enough on the size of a dining table to give one mess a day to all who gather about that table, one time I had acres when I could squat on my feet and reach two to five quarts of nice fruit without getting out of my tracks. I did this one time and picked five quarts, at another time one of my pickers brought in 100 quarts before noon and that day he picked two hundred and twenty quarts.

Acres of strawberries where they are to be kept over are mowed, and the mulch "redded up" and when a good wind, burned over, this keeps the plants free from insects and blight. If the acres are free from insects the rows can be narrowed down with the plow disk or cultivator, then well covered with well rotted manure and thinned in the row and kept clean. Some of the best strawberry growers plow under the old beds every year.

TO PRESENT QUEEN ESTHER AT DELAVAN LAKE ASSEMBLY.

Choir of Presbyterian Church Asked to Give Cantata on Eighth Day of Session, August 3.

On the invitation of the management of the Delavan Lake Assembly the choir of the Presbyterian church of this city will present the cantata of "Queen Esther" on the eighth day of the session, August 3. The cantata was given here some time ago under the direction of Prof. J. S. Taylor, and Mrs. J. B. Day, winning much praise, and its reproduction promises to be one of the best musical numbers on the assembly program. The cantata is the story of the Hebrew heroine who saved her countrymen from annihilation in Persia, and those taking part in it wore the costumes of that remote time.

URGES AN INCREASE IN SEALER'S SALARY

State Inspector of Weights and Measures Says Janesville Sealer is Too Poorly Paid.

F. P. Downing, chief inspector of weights and measures, was in Janesville yesterday and held a conference with City Sealer Kennedy relative to the making of effective tests upon scales and measures in this city. It was Mr. Downing's decided opinion that the Janesville official was paid far too small an amount when the importance of the office is considered. He said in regard to the matter:

"Mr. Kennedy has an extremely important position as it will devolve upon him not only to seal all weighing and measuring appliances, but to see that the state law relating to weights and measures is enforced. It will be poor policy on the part of the new council to fail to give the local sealer a salary commensurate with the numerous duties he is called upon to perform."

Under the supervision of the office by the state department of weights and measures the local sealers will be required to perform many duties not required of them as formerly employed under the local ordinance. Mr. Kennedy is now more than a city sealer. He is officer of the law with police power and is required to arrest all violators. He should be paid at least as high a salary as that given the police officers. He should be provided with a conveyance to carry around heavy weights used in the sealing of wagon scales. Mr. Downing said that the salary offered the city sealer in Janesville was lower than in any other city of its class in the state. The amount paid in this city is $200 a year or $16.66 a month. In other cities the salaries range per month as follows: Beloit, $60; Watertown, $50; Wausau, $75; Marinette, $80; Portage, $50; Ashland, $85; Stevens Point, $50; Racine, $85; and Madison, $100.

HAY FEVER.

(By Howard L. Rahn.)

HAY fever is a moist and industrious ailment which attacks a man just when his last hankerchief has gone to the laundry. It is a very sociable and tenacious disease, and never lets go until it is pried loose by a hard frost. It assaults both sexes in a vicious and unprincipled manner about the time the fragrant rag weed begins to bloom. Hay fever is never mistaken for a hard cold by anybody who has encountered it when it is in good form. It is usually introduced by a series of syncopeated sneezes which sound like feeding dynamite caps to a goat, and is accompanied by lame back, pains in the chest, hardening of the arteries, water on the knee joint, and extreme lassitude everywhere except in the nose and the territory abutting thereon. Hay fever has a very discouraging effect upon the sense of smell, and lowers a man's vitality until he can't distinguish the odor of heliotrope extract from the odor of heliotrope extract from the rich perfume of the boiled cabbage.

Many a man has been seized around the salivary glands by the hay fever, while sitting at some banquet table, and had his appetite made null and void to such an extent that he couldn't tell a hamburger sandwich from a cream puff. There is no cure for hay fever this side of the evergreen shore. In order to avoid being dogged around all summer by this damp and mournful ailment, a great many people take to the pine woods of Wisconsin, where a sneeze is considered a penitentiary offense, while others remain at home and associate with the mental in-ferior and the cold compress. When the hay fever becomes about enough to cause a man to breathe in monthly instalments it is called asthma, and is not interfered with by any of the medical profession. There is nothing that will excite a peaceful, home at-tack of hay fever into fiendish and eruptive activity quicker than a drive through some placid rural precinct, where the olfactory nerve can be landed on at frequent intervals by the pollen of the insubstantial juniper weed. Like Christmas, hay fever comes but once a year, but if it ever comes the hem-stitched hankerchief industry would have to put on three shifts.

TOOK HIS OWN LIFE IN DESPONDENT FIT WEDNESDAY MORNING

W. Henry Freals, Former Railroad Man Once a Resident Here, Died at Niece's Home Near Beloit.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Town Line, Beloit and Rock, July 18.—W. Henry Freals, for many years a well known railway conductor on the Chicago and Northwestern road, shot and instantly killed himself at the home of his niece, Mrs. Elbert Dayton, in the town of Beloit, yesterday morning about ten o'clock.

Mr. Freals had been in poor health for about five years when he retired from active service on the road and a despondent fit is the probable cause of his unfortunate act yesterday.

He had suffered a nervous breakdown several months ago and spent eleven weeks this spring at a Madison sanatorium. Three weeks ago he left the hospital and came to the home of his niece, Mrs. Elbert Dayton, near here, and was convalescing at her home.

Shortly before ten o'clock yesterday morning he came in from out of doors and was unwilling to go upstairs until his sister, who was busy in one of the rooms, came down. He evidently came in for the purpose of securing his revolver and his body was found near the corn-crib some distance from the house about twenty minutes later by Mrs. Dayton's small son. He had fired one shot through his head and death had been instant.

Among the things found in his room was a check made payable to Elbert Dayton and dated July 8th. There was also a letter dated July 13, which explained to his relatives that he intended putting himself out of the way and asked their forgiveness.

Mr. Freals was the first son of John and Elizabeth Freals, and was born in Oneida county, New York, fifty-seven years ago. He came with his parents to Afton while a young boy and when a young man engaged in work on the railroad, continuing in the service for thirty-five years. For many years he was a passenger conductor on the train running between Harvard and Winona and later he was conductor on a passenger between Janesville and De Kalb, making his home in Janesville. He also had a run between Lancaster and Milwaukee.

Five years ago he left the service of the Northwestern road owing to failing health and bought land in Barren county, Wis. Here he lived a beautiful home where he lived for several years. Mr. Freals never married. He leaves two sisters and two brothers: Mrs. Julia Moore of Beloit; Mrs. Martha Hawkins of Waukegan; Edward Freals of Holland, Mich.; and Charles Freals of Madison.

Funeral services will be held tomorrow afternoon at 12:30 at the home of his niece, Mrs. Dayton. Burial will be at Afton cemetery.

Frank Rodau, son of Ferdinand Rodau, residing on the river road six miles north of Beloit, died at six o'clock this morning at the home of his sister, Mrs. Paul Gaske, in the town of Beloit, where he had been for the past month. He had been ill for three or four years with tuberculosis. He had spent some time in Montana hoping to improve his condition, but returned home in March. He was twenty-one years old June 20, last. He leaves three sisters, four brothers, one half-brother and one half-sister. Funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

His Hard Lot. "My lot is a hard one!" he muttered, and his face wore a look of despair; too true were the words that he uttered, as he paused with his spade in the air. He'd thought to make garden that day and his pulses with pleasure had fluttered; but he struck solid rock and said, my lot is a hard one," he muttered.

Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no back-ache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

He Wasn't an Angel.

During one of the earlier discussions of the United States tariff in the Canadian parliament, an opposition member characterized the attitude of the government on the question as "a slight that would make angels weep and jackasses laugh." The Hon. Frank Oliver, who was then minister of the interior, replied, with his usual deliberate calmness: "I have observed that the honorable gentleman has been one of those who laughed."—Judge.

"Alas, madame," said Porthos, in the most melancholy tone he could assume, "when we are about to enter upon a campaign, a campaign in which my presentiments tell me I shall be killed—in a fortnight's time this fatal campaign is to open. I shall be fearfully engaged in providing for my equipment. Then I am obliged to make a journey to my family in the lower part of Brittany to obtain the sum necessary for my departure."

Porthos observed a last struggle between love and avarice.

"And as," continued he, "the duchess you saw at the church has estates near to those of my family, we mean to make the journey together. Journeys, you know, appear much shorter when we travel two in company."

"Come to our house tomorrow," said the woman. "You are the son of my aunt, consequently my cousin; you come from Noyon, in Picardy; you have several lawsuits and no lawyer. Can you collect all that?"

"And be upon your guard before my husband, who is rather shrewd notwithstanding his seventy-six years. The poor man may be expected to leave me a widow every hour," continued she, throwing a significant glance at Porthos. "Fortunately by our marriage contract the survivor takes everything."

"You are a woman of precaution," said Porthos, squeezing the hand of the procureuse tenderly.

"We are, then, reconciled, dear M. Porthos?" said she, smiling.

"For life," said Porthos in the same manner.

CHAPTER XXIV.

D'ARTAGNAN and the Englishman.

D'ARTAGNAN followed milady without being perceived by her. He saw her get into her carriage and heard her order the coachman to drive to St. Germain. It was useless to endeavor to keep pace on foot with a carriage drawn by two powerful horses. D'Artagnan returned to the Rue Perou. In the Rue de Seine he met with Planchet and ordered him to go and saddle two horses in M. de Treville's stables, one for himself (D'Artagnan) and one for Planchet. M. de Treville on all common occasions had allowed him the liberty to do so.

D'Artagnan and Planchet got into the saddle and took the road to St. Germain.

As he rode along Mme. Bonacieux recurred constantly to the mind of the young man. He was ready to go to the end of the world to seek her; but the world being round, it has many ends, so that he did not know which way to turn. In the meantime, he was going to try to find out who milady was. Milady had spoken to the man in the black cloak, therefore she knew him. Now, in the opinion of D'Artagnan, it was certainly the man in the black cloak who had carried off Mme. Bonacieux the second time, as he had carried her off the first.

At St. Germain he rode up a very quiet street, looking to the right and the left to see if he could catch any vestige of his beautiful English woman, when from the terrace in front of a pretty house which had no window toward the street he saw a face peep out with which he thought he was acquainted.

"Eh, monsieur," said Planchet, addressing D'Artagnan, "don't you remember that face which is gazing about yonder? It is poor Lubin, the lackey of the Count de Wardes, he whom you so well accommodated a month ago at Calais, on the road to the governor's country house."

"Do you think he would recognize you?"

"I don't think he can have retained a very clear recollection of me."

"Well, find out, if you can, whether his master is dead or not."

Planchet dismounted and went straight up to Lubin, who did not at all remember him, and the two lackeys began to chat with the best understanding possible, while D'Artagnan turned the two horses into a lane and went round the house, coming back to watch the conference from behind a hedge of nut trees.

Soon he heard the noise of a carriage and speedily saw that of milady stop opposite to him. She put her charming fair head out of the window and gave her orders to her female attendant. The latter, a pretty girl of about twenty years of age, made her way toward the terrace upon which D'Artagnan had perceived Lubin.

D'Artagnan followed the girl with his eyes and saw her go toward the terrace. But it happened that some one in the house called Lubin, so that Planchet remained alone, looking in all directions for his master.

The maid approached Planchet, whom she took for Lubin, and holding out a little billet to him—

"For your master," said she. "It is of consequence—take it quickly."

Thereupon she ran toward the carriage, which had turned round toward the way it came, jumped upon the step, and the carriage drove off.

Planchet took the billet to D'Artagnan. He opened the letter and read these words:

"Oh, oh!" said D'Artagnan. "It appears that milady and I are anxious about the health of the same person. Well, Planchet, how is the good M. de Wardes; he is not dead, then?"

"Oh, no, monsieur, he is as well as a man can be with four sword wounds in his body."

"Now, Planchet, jump upon your horse and let us overtake the carriage."

They soon effected this. At the end of five minutes they perceived the carriage drawn up by the roadside. A cavalier, richly dressed, was close to the coach door.

The conversation between milady and the cavalier was so animated that D'Artagnan stopped on the other side of the carriage without any one but the pretty maid being aware of his presence.

The conversation took place in English, a language which D'Artagnan could not understand, but by the accent the young man plainly saw that the beautiful Englishwoman was in a great rage. The cavalier broke into a loud laugh, which appeared to exasperate milady still more.

D'Artagnan thought this was the moment to interfere.

"Madame," said he, "will you permit me to offer you my services?"

At the first word milady turned round, looking at the young man with astonishment, and when he had finished:

"Monsieur," said she in very good French, "I should with great confidence place myself under your protection if the person with whom I quarrel were not my brother."

"Ah, excuse me, then," said D'Artagnan. "You must be aware that I was ignorant of that, madame!"

"What is that stupid fellow troubling himself about?" cried the cavalier. "Stupid fellow yourself!" said D'Artagnan.

made a movement as if to follow, but D'Artagnan, whose anger, already excited, was much increased by recognizing in him the Englishman of Amiens who had won his horse and was very near winning his diamond of Athos, caught at his bridle and stopped him.

"Well, monsieur," said he, "we will see if you can handle a sword as skillfully as you can a dice box."

"Where?"

"Behind the Luxembourg at 6 o'clock."

"That will do. I will be there."

"Apropos you have probably one or two friends?"

"Humph! I have three who would be honored by joining in the sport with me."

"Three! That's fortunate. That falls out oddly. Three is just my number."

"Now, then, who are you?" asked the Englishman.

"I am M. d'Artagnan, a Gascon gentleman serving in the guards in the company of M. Dessezzart. And you?"

"I am the Lord de Winter, baron of Sheffield."

Later D'Artagnan employed himself in arranging a little plan of which we shall hereafter see the execution and which promised him some agreeable adventure.

The hour being come, D'Artagnan and the three guardsmen, with their four lackeys, repaired to a spot behind the Luxembourg. The lackeys were charged to act as sentinels.

The Englishmen were all men of rank. Consequently the extraordinary names of their adversaries were for them not only a matter of surprise, but of uneasiness.

"But, after all this," said Lord de Winter when the three friends had been named, "we do not know who you are. As gentlemen we cannot fight with such."

"You gambled very willingly with us without knowing our real names," said Athos.

"That is true, but we fight with our equals only."

"And that is but just," said Athos, and he took aside that one of the four Englishmen with whom he was to fight and communicated his name in a low voice.

Porthos and Aramis did the same.

"You would have acted much more wisely if you had not required me to make myself known," said Athos.

"Why so?"

"Because I am believed to be dead and have reason for wishing nobody should know I am living, so that I shall be obliged to kill you to prevent my secret getting wind."

The Englishman looked at Athos, believing that he was joking, but Athos was not joking the least in the world.

"Gentlemen," said Athos, addressing at the same time his companions and their adversaries, "guard!"

And immediately eight swords glittered in the rays of the setting sun.

Athos fenced with as much calmness and method as if he had been practicing in a school.

Porthos, connected, no doubt, of his too great confidence by his adventure of Chantilly, played with prudence.

Aramis, who had the third canto of a poem to finish, made all the dispatch of a man very much pressed for time.

Athos, the first, killed his adversary. He hit him but once; but, as he had foretold, that hit was a mortal one.

Porthos, the second, stretched his upon the grass with a wound through his thigh, and as the Englishman, without making any further resistance, then surrendered his sword, Porthos took him up in his arms and carried him to his carriage.

Aramis pushed his so vigorously that after going back fifty paces he finished by fairly taking to his heels and disappeared amid the hooting of the lackeys.

As to D'Artagnan, he fought purely and simply on the defensive, and when he saw his adversary pretty well fatigued, with a vigorous side thrust he twisted the sword from his grasp and sent it glittering into the air.

"I could kill you, milord," said he to the Englishman. "You are completely at my mercy, but I spare your life for the sake of your sister."

D'Artagnan was at the height of joy. He had realized the plan which he had fancied, the development of which had produced smiles upon his face.

The Englishman, delighted at having to do with a gentleman of such a kind disposition, pressed D'Artagnan in his arms and paid a thousand compliments to the three musketeers, and as Porthos's adversary was already installed in the carriage and as Aramis had run away, they had nothing to think about but the defunct. He was taken away by his friend.

"My young friend, if you will permit me, I hope to give you that name," said Lord de Winter; "on this very evening, if agreeable to you, I will present you to my sister, Lady Clarik; for I am desirous that she should take you into her good graces, and as she is not in bad odor at court, she may perhaps on some future day speak a word that will not prove useless to you."

D'Artagnan blushed with pleasure, and bowed a sign of assent.

Lord de Winter, on quitting D'Artagnan, gave him his sister's address. She lived in No. 6 Place Royale, then the fashionable quarter, and undertook to call and take him with him in order to introduce him. D'Artagnan appointed 8 o'clock at Athos's residence.

This introduction to Lady Clarik occupied the head of our Gascon greatly. He remembered in what a strange manner this woman had hitherto been mixed up in his destiny. According to in humor which D'Artagnan had just remarked. "You have today acquired eternal rights to my gratitude."

Lord de Winter went to a table upon which was a salver with Spanish wine and glasses. He filled two and by a sign invited D'Artagnan to drink.

D'Artagnan knew it was considered disobliging by an Englishman to refuse to pledge him, therefore drew near to the table and took the second glass. He did not, however, lose sight of milady, and in a mirror perceived the change that took place in her face. Now that she believed herself to be no longer observed, a sentiment which resembled ferocity animated her countenance. She bit her handkerchief with all her might.

That pretty little maid whom D'Artagnan had already observed then came in; she spoke some words to Lord de Winter in English, and he immediately requested D'Artagnan's permission to retire, excusing himself on account of the urgency of the business that called him away and charged his sister to obtain his pardon.

D'Artagnan exchanged a shake of the hand with Lord de Winter and then returned to milady. Her countenance, with surprising mobility, had recovered its gracious expression, but some little red spots upon her handkerchief indicated that she had bitten her lips till the blood came.
